Dated Bangalore, 1st December 1936.

AIR NAVIGATION IN INDIAN STATES

SIR,

I am directed to say that with the rapid development of aviation in India, the choosing of sites for aerodromes and the preparation of plans for their construction assume greater importance every year; and the Government of India feel that in the near future Indian States may be turning their attention in an increasing degree to this question. They wish therefore to draw the attention of the States to the fact that while the Government of India Civil Aviation authorities are not in a position to undertake the preparation of detailed aerodrome schemes, they are always ready to supply the names of the nearest persons officially recognised as competent to advise generally on the suitability of sites for development as permanent aerodromes and are similarly prepared to offer technical advice on all development schemes connected with aviation which may be submitted by the States' engineers

I have the honour to be,
Sir,
Your most obedient servant,

SECRETARY TO THE RESIDENT
